

Share in the Harvest!

Members of Worden Farm eat fresh, local, organic produce in season

"We have been totally pleased with our box each week. The variety and condition of the vegetables have been first rate. The taste can't be beat, and your recipes are so well chosen and practical."

~ Penny Adams, Worden Farm Member

About Worden Farm

Worden Farm is an 85-acre certified organic family farm, raising crops on 35 acres for hundreds of local families in the Southwest Florida community. The farm is owned and operated by husband and wife team Chris and Eva Worden, Ph.D.s in plant science and ecosystem management.

The USDA-certified organic crops of Worden Farm are grown without any conventional pesticides, synthetic fertilizers, or genetically-engineered seeds. Ecological techniques are used to conserve resources and protect soil and water resources, wildlife, and human health. Worden Farm is certified organic by Quality Certification Services, an independent, USDA-authorized organic certification agency.

Worden Farm is dedicated to:

- producing organic foods of the highest quality
- cultivating community connection to the farm
- promoting the viability of the family farm through stewardship & innovation

Harvest Shares

Worden Farm members receive a healthy harvest share each week, in season. Harvest shares consist of a balanced array of several different produce items, including salad greens, cooking greens, root crops, fruiting vegetables, culinary herbs, and occasional fruit crops.

A harvest share comfortably fulfills the weekly produce needs of 2-4 people who eat plenty of vegetables. The harvests vary with the time of the season. Most all of the produce is grown at Worden Farm, and on occasion, for more variety, we include local organic or sustainable produce from neighboring farmer friends. Our incomparably fresh produce is an excellent value, with superior flavor, nutrition & longevity.
